Preface

1912835

No claim of completeness or even approximate completeness is made for the present list of Revolutionary soldiers of Virginia. While much fuller in every way than any other list ever published, it is but tentative, and does not include all the lists of soldiers known to be in existence. Permission could not be gained for copying the rolls in the War Department in Washington, and this omission is a serious deficiency. And in addition to these lists, which were not obtained, though preserved amongst the archives of the Federal Government, it is believed that the researches still being conducted by the Virginia State library will bring to light other rolls whose whereabouts can now be only guessed at, while from time to time regimental and company rosters may turn up in out-of-the-way places. The list, therefore, is merely the first stage of a work to be continued for many years and brought to a conclusion only when the sources of Virginia Revolutionary history shall have been completely explored, leaving no reasonable hope for further discoveries.

The vague and unsatisfactory nature of the estimates hitherto made of the number of Virginia troops in the Revolutionary War is largely due to the fragmentary condition of the records. The non-existence of regular military rolls among the archives of the State has left such estimates to be based upon the returns of the Continental line, which, for various reasons, have proved misleading. In the absence of proper records, the result has been that many people have believed that Virginia contributed but few troops for the war, while, on the contrary, probably no other State furnished more.

The Virginia forces in the Revolutionary War may be considered under four heads: (1) Continental, (2) State, (3) Militia and (4) Navy.

Virginia furnished fifteen regiments of the continental line, which were entirely in the service and at the command of Congress. Saffell publishes lists of several of these regiments, but not of all, and the number of men serving in them, first and last, can only be told by an examination of the rolls at Washington.

Besides this quota of regiments supplied by the State, other commands, raised mostly or wholly in Virginia, served in the Continental army, but, being congressional forces pure and simple, are not accredited to the State. Such were Nathaniel Gist's, Grayson's and Thurston's regiments of infantry, Moses Rawlings's rifle companies, Harrison's artillery, Bland's and Baylor's dragoons and Lee's and Armand's legions. Of these commands Gist's regiment is given in Saffell as from Virginia and is consequently included in this index; Rawlings's rifle companies and Harrison's artillery, being made up of Marylanders in part as well as of Virginians, though accessible in Saffell, are not given in the index because of the impossibility of separating the soldiers from the two States. Pay rolls of Bland's dragoons, printed in Boogher's "Gleanings of Virginia History," are included, as well as the officers of Lee's legion, whose names are furnished by Saffell. A roll of Armand's legion is printed, apparently in full, in the documents appended to the Journal of the House of Delegates of Virginia for 1833-4. Some of the names of Baylor's dragoons have been recovered, but not a full list. Pay rolls of all these continental commands are probably in existence in Washington and will likely be published some day, when it will be possible to know, with a reasonable degree of accuracy, the number of men furnished by Virginia to the Continental line), and Dabney's State legion. In the absence of regular Georgia and other States recruited their own continental regiments on the soil of the Old Dominion.

The State line included three regular infantry regiments, an artillery regiment, a cavalry regiment, what was known as the "State Garrison Regiment," two regiments in Illinois, the "Convention" troops engaged in guarding the Saratoga prisoners near Charlottesville (sometimes accredited to the Continental line), and Dabney's State legion. In the absence of regular rolls of most of these commands for different years, an estimate of the number of men serving in the State line would be hazardous, but it may be said with certainty that this branch of the service was a good deal smaller than the Continental line.

The principal sources for the names of soldiers of the Continental and State lines are the lists of those serving in the two branches who received back pay due them after the war, and the index of applications for land bounties made by soldiers who had served three years or more in any military capacity or by their heirs.

The State navy may be, and sometimes is, considered as a part of the State line because of its exclusively local character. In this index, however, the navy is carefully differentiated. The number of ships and men employed in it varied greatly from time to time, but there never were at any one time more than a few hundred men in the service, few of whom, it is believed, have been omitted in the present compilation.

The branch of the State's military service impossible to analyze is the militia. A manuscript list of the militia supposed to be available for the field in 1776 gives about forty-five thousand men; the list given below includes estimates for nine counties omitted in the original, but it is believed that the numbers calculated are rather too low, if anything, than too high. The list is as follows:

Accomac	500 (estimated)	Culpeper	1,000 (estimated)
Albemarle	1,304	Cumberland	1,000
Amelia	1,100	Dinwiddie	500 (estimated)
Amherst	650	Dunmore	800
East Augusta....	2,000	Elizabeth City....	160
Bedford	1,400	Essex	400
Botetourt	1,600	Fairfax	1,000
Brunswick	1,200	Fauquier	1,100
Buckingham	650	Frederick	1,260
Berkeley	700 (estimated)	Fincastle	2,000
Caroline	600 (estimated)	Gloucester	900
Charles City	350	Goochland	520
Charlotte	812	Halifax	1,000
Chesterfield	960	Hampshire	700

Hanover	900	Northampton	500 (estimated)
Henrico	500	Orange	550
Isle of Wight.....	725	Pittsylvania	1,438
James City.....	190	Prince Edward....	550
King George	400	Prince George....	600 (estimated)
King and Queen..	600 (estimated)	Princess Anne....	450
King William....	600 (estimated)	Prince William... 1,000
Lancaster	200	Richmond	470
Loudoun	1,600	Southampton	750
Louisa	600	Spotsylvania	500
Lunenburg	573	Stafford	400
Middlesex	300	Surry	350
Mecklenburg	850	Sussex	660
Nansemond	800	Warwick	100
New Kent.....	448	Westmoreland ...	697
Norfolk	1,000	York	300
Northumberland .	700	Williamsburg	218

No later militia returns are to be found, but it is probable that the number of militia remained about the same, from 45,000 to 50,000, through 1777, 1778 and 1779, but that on account of losses by war and emigration the number decreased somewhat in 1780, 1781 and 1782, although in 1780 and 1781 the force of militia actually in service reached its maximum.

It is probable that about one-fourth of the militia saw real service, at one time or another, but in most instances for very short terms. The militia in the tidewater section was subject to frequent calls all through the war upon the strength of reports of hostile descents upon Chesapeake Bay and to repel privateers, and in the west on account of numerous Indian incursions.

The militia records are exceedingly fragmentary. Strangely enough, the pay rolls for the western department have been preserved, and it is probable that the names of few Kentucky militiamen have been lost, while the rolls for the eastern and much more thickly settled and civilized portion of the State have not been found. In the absence of pay and muster rolls, the chief sources of information are the Auditor's books of the Revolutionary period, which record the payment of the services of many individual militiamen. Unfortunately such payments are generally put down as having been made to some officer for himself and his company as a whole, without including a list of the company. It thus follows that the names of company commanders survive, while the great mass of the privates are unknown. No estimate of the number of militia called into the field in the course of the war can be safely made at the present time.

But, while I am unwilling to risk a guess (certain to prove a mistake later on) as to the number of soldiers who served from Virginia in the Revolution, it is quite clear that that number was very large in proportion to the white male population, probably even larger than the estimates hitherto made. The basis usually adopted in estimating the number of troops furnished by Virginia, as well as by all the other States, is General Knox's report as Secretary of War in 1790. This report is doubtless generally correct as to the Continental troops in the fifteen regiments or battalions furnished by Virginia, but does not include the continental troops from Virginia in other organizations than the Virginia line, fails to take into consideration the State line and merely estimates the number of militia furnished year by year, with blanks for several years. As a considerable body of men served in the State line and as the number of militia called out every year was large, it is evident that a report based only on the returns of the Virginia line in the Continental army and militia estimates is inadequate.

Even as regards the Virginia troops furnished for the use of Congress, Knox's report is not altogether satisfactory. Thus it fails to credit Virginia with any troops for the year 1775, except 3,180 militia, although Morgan's detachment of riflemen, which served with such exceptional gallantry and efficiency in the closing months of 1775, was not a militia command.

In 1776 Virginia is set down in the report as furnishing 6,181 continentals, the third largest number among the States, but no estimate whatever is made of the militia for this year, although it is known that a large force was called into the field against Dunmore, for the relief of North Carolina, and for the Cherokee expedition in the west.

In 1777 Virginia is credited with 5,744 continentals, a contingent second only to that of Massachusetts, which was 7,816, as well as 1,269 militia, while a further militia force of 4,000 is estimated to have served for short terms. These figures, which seem correct, give Virginia a total of nearly 11,000 men in service as against about 12,600 furnished by Massachusetts; but since no mention is made of the State line, consisting of a number of commands in that year, it is probable that Virginia had in actual service in 1777 as many men as had Massachusetts or even more. The losses in 1777 among the Virginia troops, always in the forefront of the battle, were severe, especially at Germantown, where a regiment was captured. Owing to these losses, the two first regiments of the State line joined the Continental army, causing a considerable reduction in the local military establishment.

In 1778 Virginia had 5,230 men in the Continental army and Massachusetts 7,010. The estimate of the Virginia militia for this year—2,600—is rather too low, as operations in the west were becoming active. Virginia's quota of continental troops in the next year, 1779, fell to 3,973, a bad second to the 6,287 of Massachusetts, but Virginia is credited with 3,000 militia in service. This calculation is again rather low in view of the fact that a British detachment landed at Portsmouth and laid waste a wide tract of country, bringing out the militia in considerable force, while Clarke was now established in Illinois with a small command, backed by the riflemen of the Kentucky counties. A thousand men were raised by Virginia and North Carolina for the defense of the frontier this year. The military activities of Virginia in 1779, in fact, were numerous. The legislature authorized the governor to send 1,500 militia to South Carolina and gave him special powers in case of invasion. The State troops for the defense of the east were incorporated with the artillery and garrison corps; the cavalry was reduced to three troops, and the commands in the west formed into one regiment. At the same time the State navy underwent a reorganization.

In 1780 the Virginia continentals were reduced to 2,486 men, but a considerable detachment had been sent to the South and lost at Charleston, and, as a result of the drain of the war, the contingents from all the States were rapidly dwindling; Massachusetts had but 4,453 men in the army. Furthermore, the energies of Virginia were diverted to the South, which had now become the seat of war. In April Woodford with 700 Virginia continentals arrived at Charleston in time to be included in the capitulation. Burk's History states that 300 or 400 Virginia troops under Heth were also present at the siege. Shortly after the fall of Charleston, Colonel Buford with 400 Virginia troops was routed by Tarleton at Waxhaw.

Virginia is credited by Knox's report with 4,500 militia in 1780, which, with continentals added, makes a force of 7,000, little less than the total of Massachusetts for the same year. Knox's estimate for this year, as usual, makes no allowance for the State line, which was still of some size. Never before during the progress of the war had such demands been made on the resources of Virginia, and large numbers of militia were called into the field in several quarters. Jefferson gives the Virginia forces intended for North Carolina in the early part of 1780 as follows:

Buford's regulars.....	400
Porterfield's State troops.....	500
Armand's horse.....	190
White's and Washington's horse.....	200
Virginia militia.....	2,500
Total	3,790

Needless to say, this militia force was not raised, but Jefferson's statement shows the strength of several of the State commands at the time.

On August 14, 1780, the eve of Camden, General Stevens joined Gates with 700 Virginia militia, most of which escaped from the subsequent battle and returned home. Again, at King's Mountain, several hundred Virginia militiamen were present from the western counties under William Campbell. In November, 1780, Baron Steuben was sent to Virginia to arrange the defense of that State. He found Generals Muhlenberg and Weedon engaged in organizing a militia force to oppose the advance of the British General Leslie from Norfolk. In the last weeks of 1780 Virginia militia were serving in Greene's army, for on December 16, Daniel Morgan was detached with 200 Virginia militia and other forces for special duty. Below is given an estimate of the Virginia troops in 1780, based, in the first place, on the returns in Burk's History, iv, 426, with the addition of the other forces not included in that work, which claims to make allowance for continental forces alone:

Infantry with the main army, including the first and second
State regiments.....	1,637
Gist's regiment.....	123
Recruits sent south under Scott.....	1,002
Colonel Porterfield.....	218
Harrison's artillery.....	85

Militia about Norfolk (at least).....	500
Militia with Greene.....	400
Militia on the frontier.....	500
Lawson's corps.....	500
State troops (not given above).....	1,000
Total	8,205

The difference between Knox's and Girardin's returns is chiefly due to the fact that Knox does not credit Virginia with those continental commands raised in Virginia but serving Congress as separate organizations and that Girardin includes one or two organizations not Continental and one also, probably, not from Virginia. The estimate I have made of the militia is in reality too low, for it amounts to only 3,000 as against the 4,500 estimated by Knox; but I prefer to be securely within the bounds of truth.

If to the 4,205 in Girardin's account be added the 4,500 militia estimated by Knox to have served, and the Virginia State line, counted at only 1,000, the total is 9,705. Such widely contrasting figures illustrate the difficulty of arriving at any conclusion as to the number of troops actually in service in a single year. But even with Knox's low calculation of 2,486 continentals and 4,500 militia, the added State line raises the total to 8,000, and I think a fair calculation would credit Virginia with something less than 9,000 men for the year 1780. This figure would include militia called out for short term service, as well as for longer enlistments, continental and State troops and men raised in the State for service in the contingents of other States.

In 1781, when Virginia was seriously invaded, practically all of the available militia was summoned to the field. Knox allows Virginia this year 1,225 continentals, 2,894 militia at Yorktown and 2,000 other militia serving short terms—a total of 6,119 men. This militia estimate of less than 5,000 is the most inadequate of all Knox's calculations, since the need of meeting two invasions necessarily brought into service nearly all the men who could respond to the calls of the executive, although some of them were not available for lack of arms. In the first days of 1781, 800 militia engaged (ineffectively) in the defense of Richmond, while Simcoe at the same time dispersed a body at Charles City Courthouse. A force of 1,123 Virginia militia served in Greene's army at Guilford Courthouse, and at least 2,000 militia joined Lafayette in his campaign in the summer of 1781, while more than 4,000 are said to have been present at Yorktown, nearly all of which were from Virginia. Allowing for some duplication of the militia attending Lafayette's army and at Yorktown, the number remains large, especially when the western forces, rather considerable in 1781, are added. It is probable that about 6,500 or 7,000 militia bore arms in the various campaigns and alarms of the crucial year.

Besides, at this time, the State line was of some size. The military boards of February and April, 1782, returned lists of the first and second State regiments, the first and second State artillery regiments, the State garrison and Illinois regiments, State cavalry and the Illinois troop of light dragoons. No returns came from the other State organizations, the navy and Crockett's regiment. The diminution of the continental quota from Virginia in 1780 and 1781 was doubtless due in part to the withdrawal of the first and second State regiments from the Continental army, but as these commands were in active service they should be considered in any estimate of the Virginia forces. Furthermore, the pressure of the war in the South in the latter years bore heavily on Virginia and prevented the recruiting of her regiments in the northern field, where hostilities languished. The report of the committee of the House of Delegates on military claims in 1831 says: "During the progress of that war, each State, while it was required to furnish its quota of troops and of money for the general or continental service, also raised a greater or smaller force for its own immediate defense. Virginia sustained and equipped a very considerable military and naval force, besides her militia, who were frequently and in great numbers in service."

In view of the evidence, I think that a conservative estimate would put the number of Virginia troops in 1781, Continental, State and militia, at about 10,000.

But in spite of the fact that approximate estimates may be ventured for some of the individual years of the war, it is nevertheless difficult and almost impossible to make a reasonably satisfactory calculation for the whole number of men in arms between 1775 and 1783. Probably militia calls occurred of which no account now exists, while we can only guess at the number of men actually brought into the field in the calls and campaigns of which we are cognizant. But in the event of the discovery of militia rolls and other aids to enumeration, the historical student at some time in the future may be able to speak authoritatively of the number of Virginians who saw service in the Revolutionary War.

The difficulty, however, is one not confined to Virginia, for in the case of most of the other States the returns of Revolutionary troops are unreliable and unsatisfactory. The figures given for Massachusetts, 67,907, cannot be taken very seriously, since they have been arrived at by adding together the Massachusetts contingents for individual years as given in Knox's report. As many of the men were in service several years or were called out in the militia several times, the effect of such a method of calculation is to transform addition into multiplication.

Heitman, in his "Historical Register of Officers in the Continental Army," credits Massachusetts with the customary 67,907 men in continental service and with 20,000 militia, making a total of 87,907. He gives Virginia 26,678 continentals and 20,000 militia—56,678 altogether. The figures for the Virginia Continental service represent the same arithmetical process as for Massachusetts and are as unreliable. The estimates of militia seem mere guess work, since, after a considerable study of the subject, I am not willing to make an estimate of the Virginia militia because of the lack of satisfactory evidence. Heitman, admitting the untrustworthiness of his figures, which amount to a total of 376,771 for all the States, offers the opinion that not more than 250,000 men were in actual service. Even the latter number is too high, in my opinion, although I am aware of the inefficiency and waste of men and material inseparable from the efforts of a confederacy to wage a long and sternly contested war—large potential numbers represent small actual forces. Still the American armies, except at the very beginning of the war, were always small, the populations of the States were sparse and a considerable proportion of the people indifferent or actually hostile. When an estimate is made of the American forces in the Revolution, allowance is necessary for the men that fought on the royal side, who, in some States especially in North and South Carolina, Georgia and New York, amounted to considerable numbers. A very large proportion of the troops, too, were short-term militia, invariably expensive to maintain and almost invariably useless in the field. Heitman's calculation of 30,000 militia for Virginia must be intended to cover such short-term men, but it seems likely that the final figures for the militia will not fall short of his guess and may go higher. In the case of Massachusetts, it is evident that the figures for the Continental line are much too high, but, on the other hand, it seems to me that Heitman's estimate of 20,000 militia is rather too low. Militia unquestionably served in large numbers, alike in Virginia and Massachusetts, and alike demonstrated the inefficiency of militia in regular warfare. In 1781 the Virginia Assembly placed 20,000 militia at the Governor's disposal, about one-half of the total militia of the State at that time, if the statement furnished in 1776 and quoted above may be accepted as a basis of calculation. This large force was not brought into service and could not have been; arms would have been wanting for half this number even if the men could have been draughted. The offer of the services of nearly a moiety of the able-bodied men of the State represented, however, a disposition to make extreme efforts and confirms the belief that an unprecedentedly large militia force was out in this year.

The meagerness of the State's military records, deplored before, not only prevents estimates of numbers, but renders it difficult to determine the exact branch of the soldier's service in many cases, and further complications arise from the presence in the Continental army of the first and second State regiments; moreover, there is a considerable confusion in other ways of the Continental and State lines. As a result of all this, while the greater part of the soldiers of the Continental and State lines and the militia can be identified with their branches, a sufficient number of cases remain in which nothing more can be said than that the soldiers in question indubitably served in the Revolution. This deficiency has caused in this compilation of names the abandonment of the effort, made at first, to designate the branch of service, except in the case of the navy. Service in the navy is marked with an "n," because in nearly all cases this branch of the service is mentioned in the records.

In the matter of the residence of soldiers and personal details of their lives, the records are still more barren. The residence of soldiers is given in the index when known, as this information is too valuable not to be included even in a mere list of names.

The actual number of soldiers represented by the index cannot be determined with any degree of certainty. In the case of officers, names are repeated with each grade of commission. In this way the same officer often appears in the index in separate entries, but, on the other hand, if the names of officers were given but once, with the various ranks attached, officers of the same name but of different rank would be confused.

The system differs for private soldiers. Owing to the difficulty of differentiating privates of the same name on account of the brevity of the records, the various references to soldiers of the same name are attached to a single entry, except where the soldier's place of residence is given; then the name is printed twice, once with the reference which includes the place of residence and a second time with the other references. Likewise, in referring to men of the same name who served in the army and the navy, the name is given for both branches.

This system is burdened with the inescapable defect of grouping different individuals under the same entry, and, in the case of frequently found names, a considerable number of men are sometimes referred to as if but one man. But the same person is often referred to in several different places, while variations of spelling frequently cause several entries to be made for a single man. For all these reasons it has been found impossible to ascertain the number of soldiers included in the index.

This difficulty of making identifications and of estimating the number of soldiers, resulting from the confused and unsatisfactory conditions of the records, has baffled previous examinations. The Journal of the House of Delegates for 1829-30, p. 127, in giving the report of the committee on Revolutionary claims, states: "Your committee are unable to ascertain, with any degree of accuracy, the number or the rank of the officers attached to the Virginia State line in May, 1779, or at any subsequent period. As the term of enlistment expired, the respective regiments were from time to time reduced; and thus the officers attached to them frequently became supernumerary, and continued without a command, until other regiments were raised, or a vacancy occurred, so as to call them into service again. The documents belonging to the office of the Commissioner of War, during the Revolution, having been almost entirely destroyed or lost, your committee have not had access to any public or accredited records, designating those officers who during the progress became supernumerary, or what portion of the supernumeraries again entered the service, resigned, were suspended or cashiered. Your committee believe it was not infrequently the case, that supernumerary officers of the State line entered the continental service and thus forfeited their claims on Virginia."

One element which adds greatly to the difficulty of getting at the number of troops from a State, or even the number in a single command, returns for which exist at various times, is the extreme mutability of the Revolutionary forces. The American troops were almost always badly fed and badly clothed, and consequently lost more men by sickness than properly equipped and properly provisioned armies. Besides, many men enlisted for short terms and re-enlisted several times, and invalided soldiers when cured frequently returned. A recently discovered list of Morgan's first rifle company differs greatly from the published rolls of his companies as they existed later on, and what is true of Morgan's command is true of others. Elimination proceeded with remarkable rapidity in the Continental army. Because of the difficulties stated above, I am not prepared to say more at present as to the size of the forces contributed by Virginia to the Revolution than that it was a large proportion of her white male able-bodied population; she gave her full share of men, arms and supplies to the general cause. The records for all the contributions of men and material were so carelessly kept and have been in such part destroyed that the question of the number of Virginians serving in the Revolution can be answered only by piecing the evidence which remains and studying it critically. Madison once said that upwards of ten thousand stand of arms had been sent from Virginia to Washington's army. No record of this apparently exists, but the statement is corroborated in part by the great scarcity of arms in Virginia toward the close of the war. Little better records remain of the great quantities of provisions shipped up Chesapeake Bay for Washington's support; all the records bearing on the war are most unsatisfactory for the purpose of supplying numbers and statistics. Something has been done, however, in the present work to recover the names of Virginia soldiers hitherto found scattered and almost inaccessible places; and if this effort, imperfect it may be, shall serve as the first part of the completion of a great historical task it will not be in vain.

The number of entries in this index is between thirty-five and thirty-six thousand.

The first of these is the fact that the majority of the cases of this disease are reported from the United States and Canada. This is not surprising, since these countries are the most highly developed in the world, and the most likely to have the resources necessary for the study of this disease. The second fact is that the majority of the cases are reported from the United States and Canada. This is not surprising, since these countries are the most highly developed in the world, and the most likely to have the resources necessary for the study of this disease. The third fact is that the majority of the cases are reported from the United States and Canada. This is not surprising, since these countries are the most highly developed in the world, and the most likely to have the resources necessary for the study of this disease.

There is a large amount of material on this subject in the literature, and it is not possible to do justice to it in a short article. The reader is referred to the original sources for a more complete account of the subject. The following is a list of the most important references on this subject. The first of these is the fact that the majority of the cases of this disease are reported from the United States and Canada. The first of these was the discovery of gold in California in 1848. This led to a great influx of people to the West, and the establishment of many new settlements. The second was the discovery of gold in Colorado in 1859. This also led to a great influx of people to the West, and the establishment of many new settlements. The third was the discovery of gold in Nevada in 1859. This also led to a great influx of people to the West, and the establishment of many new settlements. The fourth was the discovery of gold in Idaho in 1860. This also led to a great influx of people to the West, and the establishment of many new settlements. The fifth was the discovery of gold in Montana in 1862. This also led to a great influx of people to the West, and the establishment of many new settlements. The sixth was the discovery of gold in Wyoming in 1869. This also led to a great influx of people to the West, and the establishment of many new settlements. The seventh was the discovery of gold in Utah in 1871. This also led to a great influx of people to the West, and the establishment of many new settlements. The eighth was the discovery of gold in Arizona in 1876. This also led to a great influx of people to the West, and the establishment of many new settlements. The ninth was the discovery of gold in New Mexico in 1878. This also led to a great influx of people to the West, and the establishment of many new settlements. The tenth was the discovery of gold in Texas in 1880. This also led to a great influx of people to the West, and the establishment of many new settlements.

The discovery of gold in California in 1848 was the first of a series of discoveries that led to the establishment of many new settlements in the West. The discovery of gold in Colorado in 1859 was the second of these discoveries. The discovery of gold in Nevada in 1859 was the third of these discoveries. The first part of the document discusses the importance of maintaining accurate records of all transactions. It emphasizes that every entry, no matter how small, should be carefully documented to ensure the integrity of the financial data. This includes recording dates, amounts, and the nature of the transactions.

The second part of the document provides a detailed breakdown of the various types of transactions that may occur. It categorizes them into different groups, such as sales, purchases, and transfers, and explains how each type should be recorded and verified. This section also includes instructions on how to handle discrepancies and how to reconcile the accounts.

The third part of the document describes the process of auditing the records. It outlines the steps that should be followed to ensure that all transactions have been properly recorded and that the accounts are balanced. This includes checking for errors, verifying the accuracy of the data, and ensuring that all necessary documentation is in place.

The fourth part of the document discusses the importance of maintaining confidentiality and security of the financial records. It provides guidelines on how to store the records, how to control access to them, and how to protect them from theft or loss. This section also includes instructions on how to handle sensitive information and how to ensure that all transactions are properly authorized.

The fifth part of the document provides a summary of the key points discussed in the previous sections. It reiterates the importance of accurate record-keeping, proper categorization of transactions, thorough auditing, and strict confidentiality. It also includes a final statement on the overall goal of the document, which is to ensure the integrity and accuracy of the financial records.

1. The first part of the document is a list of names and addresses, which are arranged in two columns. The names are written in a cursive script, and the addresses are written in a more formal, printed style. The list appears to be a directory or a roster of some kind.

2. The second part of the document is a series of paragraphs of text, which are also arranged in two columns. The text is written in a cursive script, and it appears to be a letter or a report of some kind. The paragraphs are separated by small gaps, and the text is written in a clear, legible hand.

3. The third part of the document is a list of names and addresses, which are arranged in two columns. The names are written in a cursive script, and the addresses are written in a more formal, printed style. The list appears to be a directory or a roster of some kind.

4. The fourth part of the document is a series of paragraphs of text, which are also arranged in two columns. The text is written in a cursive script, and it appears to be a letter or a report of some kind. The paragraphs are separated by small gaps, and the text is written in a clear, legible hand.

5. The fifth part of the document is a list of names and addresses, which are arranged in two columns. The names are written in a cursive script, and the addresses are written in a more formal, printed style. The list appears to be a directory or a roster of some kind.

6. The sixth part of the document is a series of paragraphs of text, which are also arranged in two columns. The text is written in a cursive script, and it appears to be a letter or a report of some kind. The paragraphs are separated by small gaps, and the text is written in a clear, legible hand.

7. The seventh part of the document is a list of names and addresses, which are arranged in two columns. The names are written in a cursive script, and the addresses are written in a more formal, printed style. The list appears to be a directory or a roster of some kind.

8. The eighth part of the document is a series of paragraphs of text, which are also arranged in two columns. The text is written in a cursive script, and it appears to be a letter or a report of some kind. The paragraphs are separated by small gaps, and the text is written in a clear, legible hand.

9. The ninth part of the document is a list of names and addresses, which are arranged in two columns. The names are written in a cursive script, and the addresses are written in a more formal, printed style. The list appears to be a directory or a roster of some kind.

10. The tenth part of the document is a series of paragraphs of text, which are also arranged in two columns. The text is written in a cursive script, and it appears to be a letter or a report of some kind. The paragraphs are separated by small gaps, and the text is written in a clear, legible hand.

1. The first part of the paper is devoted to a general discussion of the problem of the origin of life. It is shown that the problem is not only one of the most important but also one of the most difficult in the history of science. The author points out that the problem has been discussed since the earliest times, but it was only in the last few decades that it has become a subject of serious scientific investigation.	2. In the second part of the paper, the author discusses the various theories of the origin of life. He begins with the theory of spontaneous generation, which was the dominant theory for many centuries. He then discusses the theory of biogenesis, which was proposed by Louis Pasteur. Finally, he discusses the theory of abiogenesis, which is the theory that life arose from non-living matter.
3. The third part of the paper is devoted to a discussion of the evidence for the origin of life. The author discusses the evidence from the fossil record, from the study of the chemical composition of the earth, and from the study of the chemical composition of the atmosphere.	4. In the fourth part of the paper, the author discusses the various experiments that have been carried out to test the theories of the origin of life. He begins with the experiments of Miller and Urey, which showed that organic molecules could be synthesized from inorganic matter. He then discusses the experiments of Oparin and Haldane, which showed that the conditions on the early earth could have been favorable for the origin of life.
5. The fifth part of the paper is devoted to a discussion of the various problems that are still outstanding in the study of the origin of life. The author points out that there is still much to be learned about the origin of life, and that the study of the origin of life is still one of the most important and most difficult in the history of science.	6. In the final part of the paper, the author discusses the various implications of the study of the origin of life. He points out that the study of the origin of life has important implications for our understanding of the history of the earth, for our understanding of the chemical composition of the earth, and for our understanding of the chemical composition of the atmosphere.

The first of these was the discovery of gold in California in 1848. This discovery led to a great influx of people to California, and the state became a very important one in the Union. The second was the discovery of gold in Colorado in 1859. This discovery also led to a great influx of people to Colorado, and the state became a very important one in the Union. The third was the discovery of gold in Nevada in 1859. This discovery also led to a great influx of people to Nevada, and the state became a very important one in the Union. The fourth was the discovery of gold in Idaho in 1860. This discovery also led to a great influx of people to Idaho, and the state became a very important one in the Union. The fifth was the discovery of gold in Montana in 1862. This discovery also led to a great influx of people to Montana, and the state became a very important one in the Union. The sixth was the discovery of gold in Wyoming in 1869. This discovery also led to a great influx of people to Wyoming, and the state became a very important one in the Union. The seventh was the discovery of gold in Utah in 1871. This discovery also led to a great influx of people to Utah, and the state became a very important one in the Union. The eighth was the discovery of gold in Arizona in 1876. This discovery also led to a great influx of people to Arizona, and the state became a very important one in the Union. The ninth was the discovery of gold in New Mexico in 1878. This discovery also led to a great influx of people to New Mexico, and the state became a very important one in the Union. The tenth was the discovery of gold in Texas in 1880. This discovery also led to a great influx of people to Texas, and the state became a very important one in the Union.

The discovery of gold in California in 1848 was the first of a series of discoveries that led to the great influx of people to the western states. The discovery of gold in Colorado in 1859 was the second, and the discovery of gold in Nevada in 1859 was the third. The discovery of gold in Idaho in 1860 was the fourth, and the discovery of gold in Montana in 1862 was the fifth. The discovery of gold in Wyoming in 1869 was the sixth, and the discovery of gold in Utah in 1871 was the seventh. The discovery of gold in Arizona in 1876 was the eighth, and the discovery of gold in New Mexico in 1878 was the ninth. The discovery of gold in Texas in 1880 was the tenth. These discoveries led to a great influx of people to the western states, and the states became very important in the Union.

The first part of the paper discusses the importance of the study of the history of the Chinese language. It is pointed out that the study of the history of the Chinese language is not only a matter of academic interest, but also a matter of practical importance. The study of the history of the Chinese language can help us to understand the development of the Chinese language and the culture of the Chinese people. It can also help us to understand the relationship between the Chinese language and other languages.

The second part of the paper discusses the development of the Chinese language from ancient times to the present. It is pointed out that the Chinese language has a long history and has developed through a long process. The Chinese language has been influenced by many factors, including the development of the Chinese culture, the contact with other languages, and the changes in the social and political environment.

The third part of the paper discusses the current status of the Chinese language. It is pointed out that the Chinese language is still in the process of development and change. The Chinese language is being influenced by many factors, including the development of the Chinese culture, the contact with other languages, and the changes in the social and political environment.

The fourth part of the paper discusses the future of the Chinese language. It is pointed out that the Chinese language will continue to develop and change. The Chinese language will be influenced by many factors, including the development of the Chinese culture, the contact with other languages, and the changes in the social and political environment.

The first of these is the fact that the majority of the cases of this disease are reported from the United States and Canada. This is not surprising, since these countries are the most highly developed in the world, and the most likely to have the resources necessary for the study of this disease. The second fact is that the majority of the cases are reported from the United States and Canada. This is not surprising, since these countries are the most highly developed in the world, and the most likely to have the resources necessary for the study of this disease. 1. The first part of the paper is devoted to the study of the properties of the function $f(x)$ defined by the equation and to the investigation of its behavior as $x \rightarrow \infty$. It is shown that the function $f(x)$ is increasing and concave down, and that it approaches a finite limit as $x \rightarrow \infty$.

2. In the second part of the paper, we consider the function $g(x)$ defined by the equation and study its properties. It is shown that the function $g(x)$ is increasing and concave down, and that it approaches a finite limit as $x \rightarrow \infty$.

$$g(x) = \int_0^x \frac{1}{1+t^4} dt$$

3. In the third part of the paper, we consider the function $h(x)$ defined by the equation and study its properties. It is shown that the function $h(x)$ is increasing and concave down, and that it approaches a finite limit as $x \rightarrow \infty$.

$$h(x) = \int_0^x \frac{1}{1+t^6} dt$$

4. In the fourth part of the paper, we consider the function $k(x)$ defined by the equation

$$k(x) = \int_0^x \frac{1}{1+t^8} dt$$ and study its properties. It is shown that the function $k(x)$ is increasing and concave down, and that it approaches a finite limit as $x \rightarrow \infty$.

5. In the fifth part of the paper, we consider the function $l(x)$ defined by the equation and study its properties. It is shown that the function $l(x)$ is increasing and concave down, and that it approaches a finite limit as $x \rightarrow \infty$.

$$l(x) = \int_0^x \frac{1}{1+t^{10}} dt$$

6. In the sixth part of the paper, we consider the function $m(x)$ defined by the equation and study its properties. It is shown that the function $m(x)$ is increasing and concave down, and that it approaches a finite limit as $x \rightarrow \infty$.

$$m(x) = \int_0^x \frac{1}{1+t^{12}} dt$$

7. In the seventh part of the paper, we consider the function $n(x)$ defined by the equation

$$n(x) = \int_0^x \frac{1}{1+t^{14}} dt$$ and study its properties. It is shown that the function $n(x)$ is increasing and concave down, and that it approaches a finite limit as $x \rightarrow \infty$.

8. In the eighth part of the paper, we consider the function $o(x)$ defined by the equation the first of the month of January, 1790, the city of Boston was visited by a severe frost, which was followed by a snow storm, which covered the city with a deep layer of snow.

The snow continued to fall for several days, and the city was completely covered with a deep layer of snow.
The snow was so deep that the streets were impassable, and the people were unable to go to work or to school. The snow

CHAPTER I
THE DISCOVERY OF AMERICA
The first discovery of America was made by Christopher Columbus in 1492. He was an Italian explorer who sailed across the Atlantic Ocean in search of a westward route to India. On October 12, 1492, he landed on the island of San Salvador in the Bahamas. This event marked the beginning of European exploration and colonization of the Americas.

CHAPTER II
THE EARLY YEARS
The early years of the United States were marked by the struggle for independence from British rule. The American Revolution began in 1775 and ended in 1783 with the signing of the Treaty of Paris. The new nation was founded on the principles of liberty, justice, and equality.

CHAPTER III
THE CONSTITUTION
The Constitution of the United States was drafted in 1787 and ratified in 1789. It established the framework for the federal government and the rights of the states. The Constitution is the supreme law of the land and has guided the nation through its history.

CHAPTER IV
THE GROWTH OF THE NATION
The growth of the United States was rapid in the early years. The territory of the nation expanded westward, and the population increased. The nation faced many challenges, including the issue of slavery and the relationship with Native Americans.

CHAPTER V
THE CIVIL WAR
The Civil War was fought between 1861 and 1865. It was a conflict between the Northern states, which opposed slavery, and the Southern states, which defended it. The war ended with the victory of the Union and the abolition of slavery.

CHAPTER VI
THE RECONSTRUCTION
The Reconstruction period followed the Civil War. It was a time of rebuilding the South and integrating African Americans into the nation. The Reconstruction era was marked by the passage of the Reconstruction Acts and the establishment of the Freedmen's Bureau.

CHAPTER VII
THE Gilded Age
The Gilded Age was a period of rapid industrialization and economic growth. It was characterized by the rise of big business and the accumulation of wealth by a small group of people. The era also saw the growth of the labor movement and the struggle for workers' rights.

CHAPTER VIII
THE PROGRESSIVE Era
The Progressive Era was a period of reform and social change. It was marked by the passage of the Progressive Era reforms, which aimed to address the problems of the Gilded Age. The era saw the rise of the Progressive movement and the establishment of the Federal Reserve.

CHAPTER IX
THE INTERWAR PERIOD
The interwar period was a time of relative peace and stability. It was marked by the passage of the New Deal and the establishment of the Social Security system. The era also saw the growth of the labor movement and the struggle for workers' rights.

CHAPTER X
THE SECOND WORLD WAR
The Second World War was fought between 1939 and 1945. It was a conflict between the Axis powers, led by Germany and Japan, and the Allied powers, led by the United States and the Soviet Union. The war ended with the victory of the Allies and the defeat of the Axis powers.

CHAPTER XI
THE COLD WAR
The Cold War was a period of tension and conflict between the United States and the Soviet Union. It was marked by the arms race and the struggle for global dominance. The era saw the rise of the Cold War and the establishment of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO).

CHAPTER XII
THE MODERN ERA
The modern era is a period of rapid technological advancement and social change. It is marked by the passage of the Civil Rights Act and the establishment of the Environmental Protection Agency. The era also saw the growth of the labor movement and the struggle for workers' rights.

The first of these is the fact that the American Medical Association is not a body of men, but a body of organizations. It is a federation of state medical associations, and each of these is in turn a federation of local medical societies. This makes the American Medical Association a very large and complex organization, and it is not possible for any one man to know all that is going on in it. The second fact is that the American Medical Association is not a body of men, but a body of organizations. It is a federation of state medical associations, and each of these is in turn a federation of local medical societies. This makes the American Medical Association a very large and complex organization, and it is not possible for any one man to know all that is going on in it. The third fact is that the American Medical Association is not a body of men, but a body of organizations. It is a federation of state medical associations, and each of these is in turn a federation of local medical societies. This makes the American Medical Association a very large and complex organization, and it is not possible for any one man to know all that is going on in it.

The fourth fact is that the American Medical Association is not a body of men, but a body of organizations. It is a federation of state medical associations, and each of these is in turn a federation of local medical societies. This makes the American Medical Association a very large and complex organization, and it is not possible for any one man to know all that is going on in it. The fifth fact is that the American Medical Association is not a body of men, but a body of organizations. It is a federation of state medical associations, and each of these is in turn a federation of local medical societies. This makes the American Medical Association a very large and complex organization, and it is not possible for any one man to know all that is going on in it. The sixth fact is that the American Medical Association is not a body of men, but a body of organizations. It is a federation of state medical associations, and each of these is in turn a federation of local medical societies. This makes the American Medical Association a very large and complex organization, and it is not possible for any one man to know all that is going on in it.

The first part of the paper is devoted to a discussion of the general principles of the theory of the structure of the atom. It is shown that the structure of the atom is determined by the laws of quantum mechanics, and that the laws of quantum mechanics are based on the principle of the conservation of energy. The second part of the paper is devoted to a discussion of the structure of the atom in the case of a many-electron atom. It is shown that the structure of the atom is determined by the laws of quantum mechanics, and that the laws of quantum mechanics are based on the principle of the conservation of energy. The third part of the paper is devoted to a discussion of the structure of the atom in the case of a many-electron atom. It is shown that the structure of the atom is determined by the laws of quantum mechanics, and that the laws of quantum mechanics are based on the principle of the conservation of energy.

GENERAL INSTRUCTIONS TO THE JURY
The first duty of a jury is to listen to the evidence and to decide whether or not the facts are proved beyond a reasonable doubt.
The second duty of a jury is to apply the law to the facts as found.
The third duty of a jury is to return a verdict in accordance with the law and the facts.
The fourth duty of a jury is to remain impartial and not allow any outside influences to affect their decision.
The fifth duty of a jury is to follow the instructions of the court and not to act on their own initiative.
The sixth duty of a jury is to keep their deliberations secret and not discuss the case with anyone outside the jury room.
The seventh duty of a jury is to return a verdict in a timely manner and not to delay the trial unnecessarily.
The eighth duty of a jury is to be fair and honest in their decision and not to be swayed by emotion or prejudice.
The ninth duty of a jury is to be respectful to the court and the parties and to follow the rules of the courtroom.
The tenth duty of a jury is to be brave and stand up for the truth, even if it means going against the majority.
The eleventh duty of a jury is to be diligent and pay attention to the evidence and the arguments of the parties.
The twelfth duty of a jury is to be patient and not get impatient with the trial process.
The thirteenth duty of a jury is to be courteous and polite to everyone in the courtroom.
The fourteenth duty of a jury is to be responsible and take their role seriously.
The fifteenth duty of a jury is to be a good citizen and uphold the law.
The sixteenth duty of a jury is to be a good neighbor and respect the rights of others.
The seventeenth duty of a jury is to be a good parent and teach their children the importance of the law.
The eighteenth duty of a jury is to be a good worker and contribute to the community.
The nineteenth duty of a jury is to be a good friend and support those in need.
The twentieth duty of a jury is to be a good citizen and make a positive contribution to society.

the first of these was the establishment of a permanent government for the territory. This was done by the Congress in 1800, when it passed the Organic Act for the Territory of Orleans. This act provided for a governor and a council of five members, who were to be appointed by the President. The council was to have the power to make laws for the territory, subject to the approval of the President.

The second of these measures was the establishment of a permanent court for the territory. This was done by the Congress in 1800, when it passed the same Organic Act for the Territory of Orleans. This act provided for a supreme court, which was to be composed of three judges, who were to be appointed by the President. The court was to have the power to hear and determine all cases that might arise in the territory.

The third of these measures was the establishment of a permanent school system for the territory. This was done by the Congress in 1800, when it passed the same Organic Act for the Territory of Orleans. This act provided for the establishment of a school, which was to be supported by the territory. The school was to be open to all children of the territory, and was to be free of charge.

The fourth of these measures was the establishment of a permanent military force for the territory. This was done by the Congress in 1800, when it passed the same Organic Act for the Territory of Orleans. This act provided for the establishment of a militia, which was to be composed of all able-bodied men of the territory. The militia was to be organized into companies, which were to be commanded by officers appointed by the President.

The fifth of these measures was the establishment of a permanent system of public works for the territory. This was done by the Congress in 1800, when it passed the same Organic Act for the Territory of Orleans. This act provided for the establishment of a system of public works, which was to be supported by the territory. The system was to include the construction of roads, bridges, and other public buildings.

The sixth of these measures was the establishment of a permanent system of public education for the territory. This was done by the Congress in 1800, when it passed the same Organic Act for the Territory of Orleans. This act provided for the establishment of a system of public education, which was to be supported by the territory. The system was to include the establishment of schools, which were to be open to all children of the territory, and were to be free of charge.

The seventh of these measures was the establishment of a permanent system of public health for the territory. This was done by the Congress in 1800, when it passed the same Organic Act for the Territory of Orleans. This act provided for the establishment of a system of public health, which was to be supported by the territory. The system was to include the establishment of hospitals, which were to be open to all patients of the territory, and were to be free of charge.

The eighth of these measures was the establishment of a permanent system of public safety for the territory. This was done by the Congress in 1800, when it passed the same Organic Act for the Territory of Orleans. This act provided for the establishment of a system of public safety, which was to be supported by the territory. The system was to include the establishment of a police force, which was to be composed of all able-bodied men of the territory.

The ninth of these measures was the establishment of a permanent system of public order for the territory. This was done by the Congress in 1800, when it passed the same Organic Act for the Territory of Orleans. This act provided for the establishment of a system of public order, which was to be supported by the territory. The system was to include the establishment of a court of law, which was to be composed of three judges, who were to be appointed by the President.

The tenth of these measures was the establishment of a permanent system of public justice for the territory. This was done by the Congress in 1800, when it passed the same Organic Act for the Territory of Orleans. This act provided for the establishment of a system of public justice, which was to be supported by the territory. The system was to include the establishment of a court of law, which was to be composed of three judges, who were to be appointed by the President.

The eleventh of these measures was the establishment of a permanent system of public welfare for the territory. This was done by the Congress in 1800, when it passed the same Organic Act for the Territory of Orleans. This act provided for the establishment of a system of public welfare, which was to be supported by the territory. The system was to include the establishment of a system of public works, which was to be supported by the territory.

The twelfth of these measures was the establishment of a permanent system of public security for the territory. This was done by the Congress in 1800, when it passed the same Organic Act for the Territory of Orleans. This act provided for the establishment of a system of public security, which was to be supported by the territory. The system was to include the establishment of a militia, which was to be composed of all able-bodied men of the territory.

The first part of the paper discusses the general principles of the theory of the atom. It is shown that the atom is a system of particles which are bound together by forces of attraction. The forces of attraction are of two kinds: the forces of attraction between the nucleus and the electrons, and the forces of attraction between the electrons themselves. The forces of attraction between the nucleus and the electrons are of the Coulomb type, and the forces of attraction between the electrons themselves are of the exchange type. The forces of attraction between the nucleus and the electrons are of the Coulomb type, and the forces of attraction between the electrons themselves are of the exchange type.

It is a well known fact that the average physician in the United States is not a specialist. He is a general practitioner, and his work is divided among many different branches of medicine. He is not a specialist in any one branch, but he is a generalist, and he is able to handle a wide variety of cases. This is a great advantage, for it means that he can take care of his patients in a comprehensive manner, and he can refer them to specialists when necessary.

The general practitioner is the backbone of the medical profession. He is the one who sees the patient first, and he is the one who makes the initial diagnosis. He is the one who treats the patient, and he is the one who follows up on the patient's progress. He is the one who is responsible for the patient's care, and he is the one who is trusted by the patient. He is the one who is the most accessible to the patient, and he is the one who is the most likely to be seen by the patient.
